

Objective

This conference will provide participants with in-depth knowledge of the current reform measures taken by the EU in the area of data protection in criminal justice as well as with an update on the state of play regarding pending issues such as Passenger Name Records (PNR) and data retention and their impact on the right to data protection.

Key topics

- The Commission's package reforming data protection in the EU: pros and cons of splitting the proposals?
- The proposed Directive on data protection in the area of police and justice: a sufficient measure?
- The Framework Decision on the protection of personal data processed in the framework of police and judicial cooperation in criminal matters: an outdated tool?
- Using Passenger Name Records (PNR): solution or never-ending story?
- Accessing private-sector data: the need for common regulations for the police?
- The Data Retention Directive: the way forward?
- Transfer of data to third states: a sufficient framework on EU level?
- Law enforcement access to Eurodac: what's in the Commission's proposal of 30 May 2012?

Who should attend?

Data protection officials, criminal law practitioners and representatives of law enforcement working on data protection in the framework of police or judicial cooperation in criminal matters.
